The University of Nebraska-Lincoln is an equal opportunity educator and employer.

While many understand diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) initiatives and principles as complex yet imperative for individual and organizational growth, these tenets are often not addressed nor implemented through leadership development processes.

How can we contribute towards organizational change through the implementation of inclusive leadership development procedures? Why is it imperative for us to address implicit bias, advocacy and allyship, and organizational auditing as part of the leadership development processes? What is the role of DEI in leadership development?
